Introduction

This blended learning course aims to help you to understand the nature of clinical leadership in the 21st century National Health service and how to improve your leadership skills, with a view to planning your next career move. It explores these issues in some depth, via an e-learning course and a one-day workshop in which you will consolidate and build on your learning with a mix of knowledge reinforcement and skills practice.

Course structure

- Six 20-minute e-learning modules
- one-day workshop

E-learning objectives

- Understand the changing approach to clinical leadership
- Develop your self-awareness and self-management skills
- Enhance your ability to work positively with others, influence them and make changes
- Improve your personal time and stress management skills
- Increase your ability to lead, manage and work within teams
- Review and plan your career direction and identify what you need to do next

Workshop objectives

- Gain an insight into one's own behaviour and that of others, and apply this knowledge in order to improve influencing and negotiating skills
- Understand and work with colleagues, patients, carers and other stakeholders to achieve a customer-focused outcome required within the NHS
- Review time and stress management and plan to improve both
